Cretaceous New Jersey and Secrets of the Edelman Fossil Park at Rowan University

Presented by

Heather Simmons, Associate Director for External Affairs Edelman Fossil Park at Rowan University

In a former strip mine behind a shopping center in Mantua, New Jersey—just four miles from the Glassboro campus of Rowan University—scientists are trying to solve some of Earth's most enduring mysteries about dinosaur extinction. Learn about the endeavors of world-renowned Paleontologist and Fossil Park Director Dr. Ken Lacovara to tell the story of the marine reptiles, sharks, mosasaurs and giant sea turtles that roamed the shallow sea of Cretaceous New Jersey, Also hear how Rowan is leveraging the nearly universal fascination with fossils to inspire students to engage in STEM disciplines at this unique site, which has just received a $25 million donation for construction of a world-class museum and visitors center
